Putting the “Living” in History:
Demonstrating the Past

Call For Workshop & Session Proposals

SEALHFAM is excited to announce our 2023 Conference in Conway, SC at the Horry County Museum and L.W. Paul Living History Farm. This conference will showcase the ways in which we can bring history to life for our patrons.

How do we draw our visitors into history? How do we get them to remember what they saw? History is often considered something we learn about from afar and that museums are places to go observe past objects and often reminisce about how different things were “back then.” Things were different, but people like you and me were still there, experiencing it all! Putting the “living” in history is all about getting people to see and think about people of the past and the ways in which their lives compare to ours today. Whether this be through in-person demonstrations and programs, exhibits, or through a screen, how are we living history?

The conference seeks papers presenting exciting and original ideas, methods, and experiences that help history come alive! We highly encourage hands-on workshops that leave participants with better understandings and new skills! Knowing the skills associated with the history we research, interpret, and display helps us to understand the work going on behind the photographs and documents and become familiar with terminology we may not find anywhere else.
